The only option left for her was to grab the robe of the man she had been. Jesus affirmed her courage, healed her, called her daughter, and blessed her in peace. Jesus admires your gut-honestness. How do you show it? How do you shine brighter than your religion? Look to the heart of who you are. What is your greatest place of desperation right now? Crash circumstances, fractured relationships, bruised emotions and achingly loneliness. God us in the desperate places of our lives, fights and delights to restore us, and sends us out into a world full of desperate people. "Mercy is what you will find as you advance through the treacherous that avoid you in this unpredictable land. The words are not the hollow ruminations of an academic, but rather the wisdom of a man who has been known by the heart of his disciples and friends, and the humble, incalculable circumstances he has ever endured. My life has been profoundly and deeply shaken by my friendship with Mike O'Quin. I invite you to read his meditations on human desperation. Prepare your heart. I dare you, you will never see the same."

Sinclair Ferguson shows that a deep-seated concern of the writers of the New Testament was to see Christians grow to spiritual maturity, “A, and that was the concern of the first believers, those who wrote the New Testament books. The apostles were not content to rest in the faith of the life-time, the author, who has had long experience in pastoral ministry and seminary teaching, seeks to show what Christian maturity is, and how people can grow in their Christian maturity.
